IAIA Alumni on the WEB

Staci Golar, IAIA's new Communications & Marketing Director, recently informed the IAIA community that we now have a presence on Facebook, the popular social utility network. The Museum has what is called a "place" page, and the college has an "organization" page. Individuals who have Facebook accounts connect to these pages by becoming "fans." Information that is submitted for the IAIA web calendar will be automatically placed on the Facebook pages. If you have any questions please contact Staci at 505-424-2351 or sgolar@iaia.edu.

Recent graduate John Pepion, known in the rapping world as "Nomadic" is currently preparing for this second album, entitled "Relentless." For more information visit him online at www.myspace.com/nomadichiphop.

Blackhorse Mitchell sent us some of his music on CD's and DVD's. The CD's are titled "Don't Let Go" and "Where Were You When I was Single" and one of the DVD's is titled "The Creation of Traditional Navajo Pottery, MUD." He also informed us that the book MIRACLE HILL is bound for a second printing by the UNIVERISTY OF OKLAHOMA PRESS. For more on Blackhorse Mitchell visit www.blackhorsemitchell.com.

Many IAIA alumni received awards at the Red Cloud Art Show, including Denton Lafferty, Henry Payer, Jr. and Keith Brave Heart. For a list of awards visit www.redcloudschool.org.

At the 21st Annual Native American Arts Festival in Pinetop, Arizona, Lorenzo Cassa's artwork "Lozen's Enemies-Against Ceremony" was chosen to be the next commemorative print for the 2009 Festival, and he was named the 2009 Print Artist of the Year. He was also selected for the Buyer's Choice award. To view this print and other works by Lorenzo visit his website at www.lorenzocassa.com.

Matt Bearden sent me a recent article that includes himself, Brent Greenwood and current student Micah Wesley. All three artists were doing demonstrations at the Standing Buffalo Indian Art Gallery in Norman, Oklahoma. To view this article visit <http://www.newsok.com/article/keyword/3270430/>. This gallery carries many IAIA Alumni.
